About the Authors

Shannon David, author of "Confronting the Reality of Changed Lives: Love and Loss for Women in Civil War America," graduated magna cum laude from Chapman University in May 2008 with a major in English Literature and a minor in History. She presented this paper at the Phi Alpha Theta Biennial National Convention in Albuquerque, NM in January 2008 and has also presented critical work at the Sigma Tau Delta Annual National Convention in Pittsburgh, PA. Following graduation, Shannon spent a year living and traveling in Europe and now has aspirations to teach English as a foreign language and study writing on the graduate level.

Paul Fellman, author of "Iron Man: America's Cold War Champion and Charm against the Communist Menace," graduated Cum Laude from Chapman University in May 2009 with a degree in History. His work titled "The Battle of the Somme: How the 18th Division Avoided Disaster, 1 July 1916" appeared in the debut of Voces Novae. A truncated version of that article also won honors at the 2009 Phi Alpha Theta conference held at UCLA. He is currently in the process of applying to law school for the fall 2010 semester.

Mark Johnston, author of "Dred Scott's Expansion in Judicial Power and Augmentation of Sectional Conflict," is currently a junior double majoring in History and Political Science at Chapman University. He stays involved on campus with Chapman College Democrats, student government, and Phi Kappa Tau, a fraternity. He also recently completed a semester in Washington D.C., where he interned at the Department of Justice. Upon graduating from college, he hopes to earn a Ph.D in History and to work and one day serve in Congress.

Elsa Lindstrom, author of "Lodovico Capponi: A Florentine Banker and a Lending Transaction in 16th Century Florence," grew up in Hawaii before leaving the island to begin her undergraduate career. She transferred to Chapman University for her sophomore year. During her junior year, she went abroad to study for a semester in Florence. It was here she befriended Count Niccolo Capponi, who graciously allowed her to peruse his archive and presented her with the documents she used for this paper. Now graduated with honors, Elsa has plans to obtain a Masters in International Relations. She wants to work and travel, using her knowledge and love of history to reference and support her interest in current affairs.
