Animal Planet Star Jeff Corwin Live at Chapman on Feb. 17

ORANGE, Calif., Feb. 10, 2010 -- Animal Planet star Jeff Corwin is bringing some fascinating creatures on Wednesday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m. (admission is free) when he appears in Memorial Hall with his live presentation "Tales from the Field."

Although no agreement could be worked out to sell books at Memorial Hall, Corwin will be happy to autograph his latest book, Living on the Edge: Amazing Relationships in the Natural World, available in paperback at most booksellers, after the show.

Animal Planet audiences best know Corwin as host of The Jeff Corwin Experience, one of the most popular shows on cable television. The series reaches more than 13 million viewers in the United States and is viewed in more than 70 countries worldwide. Since 2000, Corwin has partnered with Animal Planet and Discovery Communications as host and executive producer of The Jeff Corwin Experience. He also serves as the executive producer of the new series Corwin's Quest. When not in the field, Jeff lectures on wildlife, ecology and conservation to audiences across the United States. Jeff also established an interactive museum and environmental education center called the EcoZone. Based in Norwell, Mass., the town where Jeff spent his childhood, the goal of the EcoZone is to build awareness for the wildlife and ecology unique to the wetlands of southeastern Massachusetts.
