Sat.

Dear Wally,

Saturday night is the loneliest night in the week. It's been a long, long day and evening without you. I hope you thought of me often today. Did you? I had you on my mind constantly.

I went to work this A.M., left at noon and had my hair washed - went to the Ambassador shop for a manicure, bought a new black belt and came home - but there was no one to come home to, no one to hold me close and tell me nice things, and there wasn't even a letter from the one whom I wished so much could have been here. So I've been in the dumps. <sup>Quite Laid</sup> I worked the "Rubinoff" affair at the Shrine. It was a lemon and only drew a few hundred people, so that they moved them all to the main floor. Of course we did no business to speak of - exactly four rentals. It was a short concert and I stopped at home for a few minutes after.

I'm so very tired tonight. I guess all the shots and stuff I've been taking are beginning to wear me out. Wish they'd work but I'm pretty convinced they won't.

Pop, I have a chance to buy a pre-war nylon covered card, Firestone tire for 35<sup>00</sup> from one of the boys at the Union Station. He claims it only has 1400 miles on it. What do you think of it? - that seems like a lot of money but he claims that there arent any comparable buys in town. I wont buy until I get your advice.

Did you get any more news from your nephew? I hope you hear soon.

Are you getting a letter from me each day?
I'll always try to say something even tho'
it's short as this one is going to be.

I'm a sleephead tonite, darling - Oh, how I wish I could sleep
snuggled in your arm.

I love you and miss
you so much.
Florence
