Darling,

I got your letter this morning and it sure seemed funny to be getting letters once again from you. I also wish that I was sitting next to you instead too. Those ten days certainly did speed by.

Are you working overtime? I don't suppose you are though because the way you talked you didn't have much work.

now, honey, you know that was a lousy letter. That was a very sweet letter, and say, you, you didn't even offer ~~me~~ me any pretzels or chocolate covered peanuts. Now really I'm angry. Don't you know better than that?

Thank, darling, for the picture. I just keep looking at it all the time. Oh, darling, I wish we were together all the time.

Why I never called Marion a baby you tell her I think she is a very big girl.

Now, honey, when we get married we'll have a real picture made of us. and we'll have a nice bedroom apart. Oh darling, I wonder how much longer it will take. I don't think we can be married at least for another year. Honey, please think it over about what I said about Toledo.

I really think it would be best. you see you have your relative there and I know they would help you out and you wouldn't be so far from home. Honey things here are just terrible. Please believe me. You would be just wasting your time and<sup>3</sup> money. It's a good thing I have my sister here. I don't know what I would have done.

How long do you think your dad is going to work? God I hope he works for a long time, I mean at least a couple of months. Your folks sure do deserve a good break.

I have been looking in the papers for jobs for men and all they want is salesmen with a car or experienced or men that know the city. And the factories are very slow too.

Did you hear the world series?
The yankees won the first game 8-1.
Pretty good - huh?

Well tootsie, I'll have to close
as I'm all out of gas.
your own,
Evel
