Darling,

This is my first letter to my soldier husband. It seems so strange to be writing to you but I guess I might just as well get used to it.

This morning I went downtown with Bill & Dolly, and Darling guess what? I know it was a terrible thing to do with you just leaving and all but I saw the most beautiful coat at Powers & Dawly (yep that's right) so I had it laid away. It was a Chesterfield if you know what that is. You see its kind of a man tailored coat but really and truly it looks swell on me. (convinced huh?) and it looks very feminine on me too.

We are going to have macaroni and cheese for Dinner to-day. your mother has it in the oven. and Bill bought some ice cream.

You know where I'm sitting, sweetie? In the big red chair we gave your folks and I have that little foot stool on my lap to write this letter.

Bill and your Dad are playing checkers and Dolly is trying to put Ricky to sleep but with no avail. I never did see that kid go to sleep with any one around. But he certainly is cute.

Gosh I'm getting kind of excited about going to my job. This afternoon I'm going to see about it, so in my next letter I shall write and tell you all about it.

Well, darling. I shall close now and I'll write a long letter next time perhaps I shall have more news about my job and every thing.

yours always,

Frank

P.S. I love you very very much.

P.P.S. Darling, I'm going to number my letters on the outside so you will know which to open first

Evelyn
