Dearest darling,

This is the second day out, and so far I'm doing o.k. It's warmed up pretty good this afternoon so it's comfortable here sitting under a tree. It was cold last nite, but I slept warm so that part is o.k. too.

I got a Vmail letter from Chuck yesterday. He said to say hello to you, and to sis and her family. He said he can't tell us what he's doing, but we can read about it in the newspapers. I'll ^{wait} till I get back to camp to answer him as I didn't bring any air mail stationery with me.

We sure had a perfect weekend, didn't we, darling? I sure enjoyed helping you cook the dinner.

Did you have an interview at Corbett's today? Tell me when you write.

I'm sort of at a loss for anything to write now so I'll just lay off till tomorrow, and maybe then I'll have a letter from you so I can put the answer right in ~~the~~ this.

Wed. Oct. 13

Hi honey - Still not much to write about. I'm getting plenty to eat and enough sleep. So far it's been easier out here than it ordinarily is in camp.

That sure is good news about Italy declaring war on Germany, isn't it?

Thursday Oct. 14

Well, dearie I didn't get very far on last mites instalment, did I? I had to turn the flashlight out as this problem is supposed to be tactical - blackout after dark.

I got your letter today, sweetie, and sure was glad to hear from you. I miss you too, darling. It doesn't look as if I will go into camp for the weekend so I guess it will be at least a week from Saturday till I see you.

That's o.k. about the job, honey. We're doing plenty allright as it is, and things always work out right for us anyway, don't they lover? I'm glad you liked my bisquicks, sweetie. I'll be glad to be the official biscuit maker for the family.

We had a twelve mile hike this afternoon. I'm glad that's not an everyday occurrence.

Darling, you said you'd save our ration points, and when I came home we'd have a feast. Steak or hamburger will suit me fine just so I can feast my eyes on you. You're such a sweet lover.

Well, honey I guess I've written about all I know so I'll wrap up a couple hugs and some juicy kisses.

Your lover,
Jack
