Dear Emmy:

My mother told me I was never to write a lady on the typewriter. But she didn't tell me what to do if I had to choose between writing her on the typewriter and not writing her at all. Although I have not been subjected to Henri's dreadful experiences, I have just come back from Houston and New York, and I'm way behind in my correspondence.

I have a suggestion. Now that Danny has discovered at age seventeen how to get rich, why doesn't he do it and endow us all? That would take him about four years. He would then be ready for college. And we would have nothing to worry about.

In return, I will promise to do my best to stop the war in Vietnam. Believe it or not, we have an emissary now on the way to China.

Believe it or not, a man read the column you were kind enough to mention and made the Center an anonymous gift of $1,700,000.00.

Danny could do the same.

I congratulate you on your brilliant family and them on their brilliant wife and mother. I'm delighted that you are back at sculpture. I would like to see your head of Buff Chandler.

Come to see us when you can!

As ever yours,

Robert M. Hutchins
