Hey Beautiful: Calling Out Catcalling Culture

Alanna Cronk

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.chapman.edu/cusrd_abstracts

Part of the Gender and Sexuality Commons, and the Quantitative, Qualitative, Comparative, and Historical Methodologies Commons
Hey Beautiful: Call Out Catcalling Culture

Findings

Frequency
- All but three participants said they were catcalled
- Being younger increases frequency of catcalls
- Being in highly populated areas such as “the city” increases the frequency of catcalls

The Catcall Itself
- Usually preceded with a neutral action such as “walking, running, going”
- Followed by an action meant to solicit the target’s attention
- Most often “yelling or shouting”
- Five participants reported being followed

The Emotional
- Three kinds of responses: positive, neutral, negative
- Negative was the most prevalent by far
- Anxiety/fear, disgust, anger, evasion, fight or flight behavior
- “I feel gross. And I want to get out of there immediately because I feel scared.”

Methodology

COVID-19
- Campus closed down
- Social Distancing
- Opted for fully Online Survey
- No in-person interaction

Internal Review Board
- CITI training
- Expedited Review
- Subcommittee approval

Qualitative Research on Interpersonal Violence: Guidance for Early Career Scholars
- Trauma-informed approach
- Referral to mental health services
- Sensitivity to the severity of sexual harassment

Overall
- Ethnographic
- Qualitative, small sample

References

