Darling Wife,

I was just thinking of my little sweetheart (as I always am) so I just thought I'd say hello.

I read the book of short stories you sent me, and I enjoyed them very much. Remember how we used to spend some of those long winter evenings with a book? Those were certainly perfect days, darling. Everything we did together was fun, wasn't it sweetie. I also received two books from Bill and Dollie. One I'd read a long time ago - "The Maltese Falcon," by Dashiell Hammett. The other one is, "The Bigger they Come," by A.A. Fair and I believe it's going to be pretty good.

Now know it's been a long time since I've been in our little home, honey but I can just close my eyes, and see it all. I believe when I get home that for a while, at least you're going to have a hard job getting me to go anyplace. I'll be content just to be a homebody. In fact I won't even want to let you out of my arms.

Have you had all your dental work done now, sweetie? I'll bet you're glad now that it's over. That's something that's tough to get started on, but there's a lot of satisfaction when it's over.

I'm looking forward to getting back to the company so I can start getting letters from you again, honey. Sure hope I don't have to wait as long for mail as I did when I came back to England. That was rough.

I'm wrapping up millions of hugs and kisses and all my love.

Your own,
Jack
