Program Notes

Midare
Midare is one of the most famous tunes of Japanese traditional music. It was composed around 1700 A.D. by Kengyo Yatsushashi. The sectional form of this piece is called “Dan mono”, which is usually separated by a fixed number of beats in each section. However, Midare is composed freely, so performers can improvise the number of beats for every section. Midare means “disorder” or “disarray”.

Haru no Umi (The Sea in Spring)
Haru no Umi (The Sea in Spring) was composed in 1929 by Michio Miyagi. The original instrumentation of this piece is for Shakuhachi (the Japanese wooden flute) and Koto but it is now extensively played worldwide with a flute, violin, or other western instruments. Since Miyagi’s compositions are considered to be the beginning of the modern period of Koto music, there are many contemporary techniques employed in this piece: harmonics, pizzicato, and tremolos. The piece describes a calm ocean with sounds of seagulls and waves.

Renga
“Renga” is the name of a traditional Japanese rhyming game. As the title suggests in Japanese, each phrase of this piece is partly taken from the previous one, but it evolves into a different meaning, at the end completely different from the original phrase. Renga was commissioned in 2003 by pianist Hiroko Nakano. In contrast to the piece previously commissioned by Nakano, this piece has a dry sonorous effect by using very little pedaling of the piano.

— Kikuko Mosumoto

Nivarana IV – Uddhacca
The title Nivarana in Sanskrit refers to “The Five Hindrances” in the Buddhist path to enlightenment. The five hindrances are identified as mental factors that hinder progress in meditation and in our daily lives. They are:
Sensory Desire (kāmacchanda)
Ill Will (vyāpāda)
Sloth and Torpor (thīna-middha)
Restlessness and Remorse (uddhacca)
Doubt (vicikicchā)

For this piece, I chose the fourth hindrance uddhacca: inquietude, restlessness and remorse. It suggests the inability to calm the mind by regretting over decisions made and past events. Buddha compared Uddhacca with “water whipped up by the wind. Its function is to make the mind unsteady, as the wind makes a banner ripple. It is manifested as turmoil. Its proximate cause is unwise attention to mental disquiet.” ¹

Program Notes

In this piece, the restless mind is described by sudden shifts of dynamics, registral changes, and contrasting tone colors. The viola and piano respond to each other one moment then they take different directions next moment. Will there be enlightenment at the end?

Tsure Zure – for Thirteen-String Koto Solo

Tsure Zure is composed for a thirteen-string Koto, the traditional Japanese harp. This piece is dedicated to Ms. Yuki Yamada, one of the few established contemporary Koto performers in the world.

Tsure Zure is named after one of the oldest essays in Japan, “Tsure Zure Gusa” (“Essays in Idleness”) written by Kenko Yoshida, in the early fourteenth century. The first paragraph is translated as:

What a strange, demented feeling it gives me when I realize I have spent whole days before this ink-stone, with nothing better to do, jotting down at random whatever nonsensical thoughts that have entered my head. (translated by Donald Keene).

The essay illustrates psychology, philosophy, lifestyles, and the culture in its two hundred and forty three paragraphs, with a rather humorous way and with Kenko’s unique sharp criticisms based on the transiency and impermanency of Buddhism.

The traditional sound of Koto and its restrictions of having only thirteen pitches makes the sonorities simple and quiet, as the tone of the essay. At the same time, the variety of sounds produced by non-traditional ways of playing the instrument adds another layer to the music, as the deep philosophy of the essay. Tsure Zure challenges the limit of the very traditional Koto instrument and expands its psychological, philosophical, and cultural ways by bringing in the contemporary sounds.

— Yumiko Morita

Element Metal

Element Metal was composed for one of the five-piece cycle of my recent composition for chamber music. The theme of the cycle is taken from the Chinese philosophy, Yin Yang and the five elements— wood, fire, earth, metal, and water. In Yin Yang, these elements are considered to be the essence of everything that is part of the dynamic process and cyclic movements of nature.

For the solo piano piece, I chose the element “metal”. According to Yin Yang and the five elements, the element metal is assigned characteristics such as solidity, vitality, purification, dryness, grief, whiteness, among others. These characteristics are reflected in this piece as texture, rhythm, tempo, and structure. I composed this piece imagining that a lump of massive metal gradually weathers and breaks down into pieces by the force of nature, changing its texture from a solid mass to fine, dry sand. It represents the process of purification of nature, and at the same time, the grief of the decaying metal.

Program Notes

— Yumiko Morita

Resonance – for Koto and Piano

This piece is written to make two different natures of sound resonate —Koto, the plucking instrument, and the Piano, the keyboard instrument—in one. How well can they melt into each other’s sonority? Can they replace each other at all?

The breathing cycle of the piece is based on “Ma” (spacing) or the unspoken timing of conversations in Japanese. In other words, the time and space of Japanese language itself are the foundation of this piece. At the same time, the sonority of the two instruments coexists and fabricates dialogue, while they metamorphose into each other.

— Yumiko Morita

About the Artists

Contemporary Ensemble KAI was founded in 2011 by internationally acknowledged contemporary musicians from Japan, Thailand, and USA.

The name KAI is taken from a Chinese character 回 which means to revolve, circulate, trace, and flourish. The mission of the ensemble is to bring contemporary music to the world attention and “circulate” it internationally to make it “flourish”.

At each concert, the Contemporary Ensemble KAI commissions a new piece to a composer, performs new and non-established pieces, and invites composers and performers from different countries. KAI supports the establishment of contemporary music, as well as it promotes international interaction through music.

Yuki Yamada plays the thirteen-string Koto and San-gen since childhood. She graduated from Tokyo University of the Arts, Department of Traditional Japanese Music. She is a Ikuta-certified teacher of Koto. Her former teachers include Toyono Hujiki and Nanae Yoshimura.

Yamada received many important awards such as the Miyagi Prize, the first place at Kenjun Memorial Koto Music Competition (2000) and the first place at Michio Miyagi Memorial Koto Competition (2000) in Japan. She has performed at the Touka Gakudou, the Imperial Concert Hall, in front of the Japanese Emperor and his family.

About the Artists

She has performed in Japan, Taiwan, Thailand, U.S., Germany, and Russia, with Pro Musica Nipponia, Ensemble Contemporary ∂, and Contemporary Ensemble KAI. In addition to live concerts, she teaches, makes recordings, and appears on radio and TV shows. She has taught at the Showa University of Music, Kanagawa Gakuen Girls' Junior and Senior High School.

A native of Japan, Ms. Komatsu received her Bachelor of Music in piano performance from Toho Gakuen School of Music in Tokyo, and a Master of Music and Graduate Diploma in piano performance with honors at the New England Conservatory in Boston, Massachusetts. Her teachers include Seiko Seki, Gabriel Chodos and Patricia Zander.

Ms. Komatsu has won several competitions including the International Chamber Music Competition "Palma d'Oro" in Italy and the Kanagawa Competition in Japan. She has also participated in the Tanglewood Music Festival as a fellow. She has performed in Japan, Italy, USA, Taiwan, Singapore, Indonesia, Hong Kong and Thailand. She is also featured in several recordings, including John Zorn's "Angelus Novus", Dnu Huntrakul's "A Time in Bangkok", and "Chanson d'Amour"

Residing in Thailand, Ms. Komatsu is an active soloist, chamber musician and contemporary music interpreter. She has performed in numerous concerts in Bangkok with international visiting performers. In September 2007, Ms. Komatsu was invited to perform Shostakovich's Piano Concerto No. 1 with the Asean Japan Festival Orchestra to celebrate the 120th Anniversary of Japan-Thai Diplomatic Relations.

Currently Ms. Komatsu is teaching at the Trinita Music Institute in Bangkok and regularly holds training courses and seminars for local piano teachers. As a member of "Contemporary Ensemble KAI", Ms. Komatsu collaborates with composers and premieres new compositions around the world.

Described as "phenomenal and fearless," Grammy nominated pianist Vicki Ray is a leading interpreter of contemporary piano music. Known for thoughtful and innovative programming which seeks to redefine the piano recital in the 21st century, Vicki's concerts often include electronics, video, recitation and improvisation. As noted by Alan Rich, "Vicki plans programs with a knack for marvelous freeform artistry...what she draws from her piano always relates in wondrous ways to the senses." As a founding member of Piano Spheres, an acclaimed series dedicated to exploring the less familiar realms of the solo piano repertoire, her playing has been hailed by the Los Angeles Times for "displaying that kind of musical thoroughness and technical panache that puts a composer's thoughts directly before the listener."

As a pianist who excels in a wide range of styles Vicki Ray's numerous recordings cover

Kengyō Yatsushashi (1614-1685) was a composer and performer of Koto music in the Edo period in Japan. The name Kengyō is an honorary title given to highly skilled blind musicians. Yatsushashi was originally a player of Shamisen (Sangen), but later learned Koto from a musician of the Japanese imperial court. Originally restricted to the court, Yatsushashi is credited as the first musician to introduce and teach Koto to general audiences. He introduced a new tuning for Koto and made refinement to the instrument, creating a new style of Koto. He is thus known as the "Father of Modern Koto."

About the Artists

Michio Miyagi (1894 - 1956) is one of the most famous Koto players in Japan. Miyagi lost his sight when he was 8 years old, and started studying Koto under the guidance of Nakajima Kengyo. At 14, he finished his first composition, Mizu no Hentai. At 18 he reached the rank of kengyo, the highest rank for a Koto performer. He was recognized as an authority in the new Japanese music, achieving notability in the early twentieth century. In 1929 he signed an exclusive contract with Victor Record Company and his records were published in the US and England. In 1938 he became a professor at the Tokyo College of Music (current Tokyo University of the Arts). He wrote more than 500 pieces, improved Japanese string instruments, and invented new Kotos with 17 strings (bass koto) and 80 strings. He was also an essayist, and published more than ten books including Ame no Nenbutsu. He had last visited the US in 1988.

Yumiko Morita was born in Tokyo, Japan where she received early education as a pianist. She earned a Bachelor of Music Composition and Graduate Diploma at the prestigious Toho Gakuen School of Music, Tokyo. She moved to the U.S. in 1995, earned a Master of Music Degree with honor in composition at New England Conservatory, Boston, and a Ph.D. in Music Composition at the University of California, San Diego. Her former teachers include: Nobuyoshi Iinuma, Malcolm Peyton, John Heiss, Chinary Ung, Roger Reynolds, Chaya Czernowin, and Rand Steiger.

Yumiko Morita has won many international awards including the Round Top Festival (Texas), The Sonus Imaginorem Composition Contest (San Francisco), Piano Duo Competition (Japan), a finalist in the ALEA III International Competition (Boston), PatsyLu Prize of the International Alliance for Woman in Music (New York), CAP Award from New Music USA, and Tom Nee Commission from the La Jolla Symphony (San Diego). Her works are widely performed in the U.S., Europe, and Asia.

She has composed, performed, and taught at the Boston Symphony's Project STEP, the Peabody Community School, the American Composers Forum, Los Angeles, and the University of California, San Diego. She has been teaching at Hall-Musco Conservatory of Music Chapman University in Orange, California since 2006.

Invest in our next generation of artists.

The College of Performing Arts brings you the most vital and powerful part of our curriculum – live performances of dance, music and theatre. This extraordinary hands-on training for our next generation of artists is possible only through your generosity.

With every gift to the College of Performing Arts, you are helping to build and sustain a dynamic learning environment that nurtures the creativity of our students, ensuring they master their craft. Exceptional performances like what you are about to see are only made possible with support from people committed to excellence in performing arts. People just like you.

Your investment is a vote of confidence in our faculty, staff and programs, and, most importantly, it provides a meaningful difference in the lives of our talented students as they transform into tomorrow’s professional artists.

To learn more about how you can extend your support as a valued audience member by becoming an invested patron of the College of Performing Arts, please contact Peggy Ruppel, Development Coordinator, at (714) 289-2085 or pruppel@chapman.edu.
