4-27-2002

Senior Conducting Recital

Chapman University Singers

The FPCO Chamber Singers

Francisco Calvo
Chapman University, calvo@chapman.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.chapman.edu/music_programs

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.chapman.edu/music_programs/1064

This Senior Recital is brought to you for free and open access by the Music Performances at Chapman University Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Printed Performance Programs (PDF Format) by an authorized administrator of Chapman University Digital Commons. For more information, please contact laughtin@chapman.edu.
Chapman University School of Music is proud to present a

SENIOR CONDUCTING RECITAL

featuring:

THE CHAPMAN UNIVERSITY SINGERS
THE FPCO CHAMBER SINGERS

conducted by:

FRANCISCO CALVO

April 27th, 2002
7pm
St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Tustin
PROGRAM

I
Alma Redemptoris Mater........................................... Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina (1525 – 1594)
O Altitude ........................................................... Giannmateo Asola
(1524? – 1609)
Placido è il mar ...................................................... Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756 – 1791)

Combined Choirs

II
Aura Lee ................................................................................. arr. William Hall
Love Lost ...................................................................................... Paul Sjolund
3. Careless Talk
4. Your Little Hands

Shenandoah ................................................................. arr. James Erb
FPCO Chamber Singers

III
Wenn ich ein Voglein war ........................................... Robert Schumann (1810 – 1856)
Dirait-on ...................................................................................... Morten Lauridsen
FPCO Chamber Singers

IV
We'll Go No More A-Roving ........................................ James Mulholland
Were You There? ................................................................. arr. William Hall
Ain't Got Time to Die ......................................................... Hall Johnson

Combined Choirs

TRANSLATIONS

Alma Redemptoris Mater
“Loving Mother of our Saviour” direct translation:
Alma Redemptoris Mater,
Loving of Redeemer Mother,
quae pervia caeli porta manes,
who accessible of heaven gate
(you) remain,
et stella maris, succure cadenti,
and star of sea, succor falling,
surgere qui curat populo;
to rise who strives people;
Tu quae genuisti natura mirante,
you who begot nature marveling,
tuum sanctum Genitorum,
your holy Creator,
Virgo prius ac posterius,
Virgin before and after,
Gabrielis ab ore sumens illud of Gabriel from mouth receiving that
"Ave",
peccatorum Miserere.
sinners have mercy.

Poetic translation by Maynard Klein:
Loving Mother of the Redeemer, who remains the accessible Gateway of Heaven and Star of the Sea,
Give aid to a falling people
that strive to rise;
O Thou who begot thy holy Creator,
while all Nature marveled,
Virgin before and after receiving that "Ave" from the mouth of Gabriel, have mercy on sinners.

O Altitude
“O Depth”
English translation by Francisco Calvo
O the depth of the riches of God,
of the wisdom and knowledge of God,
How much among His judgments are we to comprehend in search of His way!

Placidò è il mar
“Calm is the Sea”
English Text by Basil Swift Calm is the sea, then onward,
fortune has reassured us,
our fate will shine and prosper,
soon, soon!, we'll part this shore.

Breezes far at sea gently assuaging, come calm the north-wind and his raging,
bring us your tenderness; grant us your blessing,
let your love wait kindly to all, we implore,
let your breath calm the sea and guard us,
we implore.

Calm is the sea, then outward,
fortune has reassured us,
our fate will shine and prosper,
soon, soon!, we'll part this shore.

Wenn ich ein Vöglein war
“Were I a little Bird” English translation by Robert Carl
Were I a little bird, and had two little wings,
I'd fly to you.
But since it cannot be, I will stay here.
I am so far from you, though I still do dream of you and speak with you.
When I awake my love, I am alone.
Yet no hour does pass in the night, that my heart thinks not of you.
That you give a thousand times, that you give your heart to me.

Dirait-on “So they Say”
English translation by Peter Rutenberg Unrestraint overwhelmed with unrestraint, fondness touching fondness . . .
It's your inner-self that never ceases
caressing itself,
or so they say;
caressing itself by its own nature,
by its own sparkling reflection.
Thus do you forge the image of Narcissus praying,
or so they say.
PROGRAM NOTES

Alma Redemptoris Mater

The text of Alma Redemptoris Mater was originally one of four antiphons of the Blessed Virgin Mary (Alma Redemptoris Mater. Ave Regina Caecorum, Regina Caeli, and Nave Regina). Antiphons of the Roman rite were sung in honor of the Virgin Mary. The best-known and most elaborated antiphons date from the 11th century and onwards. It became customary to sing one antiphon daily at the Compline, which is the last service of the Roman Offices or Canonical Hours celebrated daily at specified times by the clergy and members of religious orders, during the 13th century. The Office consists of prayers, psalms, canticles, responses, hymns, readings, and antiphons. Alma Redemptoris Mater is the most famous antiphon and is sung from the beginning of Advent until the 2nd of February.

Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina (1525-1594) was born in the small town of Palestrina. He served as a choirboy and received his musical education in nearby Rome. By far the greatest part of Palestrina’s overall musical output was sacred. He wrote 104 masses, and about 50 spiritual madrigals with Italian texts. The motet Alma Redemptoris Mater is just one of the 250 beautiful motets Palestrina composed. His influence on music during the late Renaissance was so powerful that he has been called “the Prince of Music” and his works the “absolute perfection of church style.” He captured the conservative order of the Counter-Reformation. Not long after he died it was common to speak of the “stile da Palestrina,” the Palestrina style, as a standard for polyphonic church music. In 1555, he served briefly as a singer in the Sistine Chapel, the pope’s official chapel, but had to relinquish the honor because he was married. He spent the remainder of his years in Rome as choirmaster at two important churches, St. John Lateran and Santa Maria Maggiore.

I would like to thank Dr. Hall for passing his love of Palestrina’s music to me. I would also like to thank him for the indescribably spiritual experience of singing Palestrina’s music in the Sistine Chapel, as well as in Santa Maria Maggiore cathedral in Rome with the Chapman University Choir.

O Altitude

Gianmattia Asola (1524?-1609) was a very active composer in Italy and in 1582 he became a chaplain at S. Severo in Venice. Most of his musical output was sacred and much of his church music is written for two or more choirs. He adopted this style of composing from the Venetian school of Andrea Gabrieli and his contemporaries. In O Altitude (from the Sacre Cantiones of 1596), Asola also shows the strong influence of Palestrina, whom he admired greatly. In fact, Asola prepared and edited a book of Vesper psalms dedicated to Palestrina in the year 1592.

Placidio è il mar

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756-1791) was the greatest musician of his day. As a composer he was supreme in all forms of music. There was literally nothing in music that he could not do better than anybody else. It has been said that he could write down a complicated piece while thinking out another piece in his head and he could sight read perfectly any music placed before him. He could hear a long piece of music for the first time and immediately write it out, note for note.

Placidio è il mar comes from the opera Idomeneo re di Creta (Idomeneus, King of Crete) which Mozart composed in 1781. Idomeneo was Mozart’s first unequivocally great opera serie. Its commission from Munich requested a major opera that combined French tragic idiom and Italian opera serie styles. The libretto of Idomeneo was written by Giovanni Battista Varesco after Antoine Danchet’s Idoménée (1712). The music from the entire opera is dramatic and pictorial; especially in the chorus of Placidio è il mar. Not only does the meter of 6/8 give the listener a sense of the ocean, but the occasional breaking of homophony with paired imitation in the chorus, achieves a liquid feel.

Aura Lee

The use of the term “folk music” to describe the culture of a nation originated in European Romanticism. The use of the term has been more fluid in the US, a relatively new country influenced by several folk traditions of European and African origin. These influences have worked together to create a hybrid “American” folk song. In “Aura Lee,” the unique fusion of hymn and spiritual gives us a distinct sense of 19th century American folk music. Over the past 60 years, during the most recent revival of folk music, the Aura Lee melody has become popular with Elvis Presley’s title “Love Me Tender.”

Love Lost

Sometimes poets and composers enjoy being satirical about that one thing that has been the subject of more music and poetry than any other subject in the history of time … Love. Paul Sjöland’s Love Lost is a cycle of four satirical poems on love. With that in mind, we will perform only the last two songs of the cycle with texts by Mark Hollis (Your Little Hands) with a little “tongue in cheek.”

Shenandoah

Shenandoah, another of the great American folksongs, is well known to audiences everywhere. In this arrangement James Erb gives the audience a vivid picture of a valley with a river running through it. He begins peacefully with women, then men singing in unison. As the piece progresses Erb uses four-part harmony and paired imitation to give the sense of a river flowing and growing larger. In the middle of the piece we have eight-part harmony with the women singing in canon. Finally, the piece gradually diminishes into a true unison. The augmentation and diminution of rhythm and vocal parts adds to this brilliant arrangement of Shenandoah.

Wenn ich ein Vöglein war

Robert Schumann (1810-1856) was born in the provincial town of Zwickau, in Saxony. His father was a bookseller, which is an important factor in the evolution of a musician to be the first Romantic composer with a real knowledge of literature and philosophy. In the backroom of his father’s shop the young Schumann discovered the marvels of poetry, fiction and history. The death of his father (in 1826) led Schumann’s mother to focus on her son’s future, and in spite of his creative talents, he agreed to a more practical career in the field of law. In 1828, though without any enthusiasm, he entered the University of Leipzig. It is said that he did not attend a single lecture, and from his own journal we know that reading and playing the piano occupied a good deal of his time. Drinking champagne and smoking cigars also seemed to occupy most of his time. However, he continued his musical studies, especially the piano, with Friedrich Wieck. With Wieck’s help, Schumann hoped to be a virtuoso pianist. But this hope was soon shattered. An invention of Schumann’s, which was created to hold the third finger motionless while practicing, permanently damaged the muscles of his left hand and forced him to abandon the piano altogether. It was only then that he decided to devote himself to composition. During this time he fell deeply in love with his teacher’s daughter Clara Wieck. His feelings for her were soon reciprocated, but it was only after many years of struggle (including lawsuits) that Friedrich Wieck finally gave his consent to their union in 1840.

Of the 250 lieder written by Schumann, the first 130 were composed in the year his wedding, 1840. Like most lieder composed before and after Schumann, his lieder contain the similar themes of love, nature, and death. Wenn ich ein Vogel war was composed in the year 1841, and was originally written as a duet with piano accompaniment. This piece was edited and arranged by William Hall.

Dirait-on is the last movement of a complete set of songs by Morten Lauridsen (b. 1943) entitled, Les Chansons Des Roses, written in 1993. Lauridsen, a long time professor and Choir of the Department of Composition at USC, has been the Composer in Residence of the Los Angeles Master Chorale since 1994. His works hold a permanent place in the standard vocal repertoire and are performed regularly by distinguished choruses and vocal artists throughout the world. Dirait-on is one of the most performed compositions of the late 20th century.

The Chansons have quickly become one of the most popular works in choral history and it is easy to understand why. The Chansons are beautifully crafted gems, and are extremely gratifying to sing. About the inspiration for his Chansons the composer has written:

>“In addition to his vast output of German poetry, Rainer Maria Rilke (1875-1926), wrote nearly 400 poems in French. His poems on roses struck me as especially charming, filled with gorgeous lyricism, dainty crafted and elegant in imagery. These exquisite poems are primarily light, joyous and playful, and the music settings are designed to enhance these characteristics and capture their delicate beauty and sensuousness. The final piece, Dirait-on, is composed as a tuneful chant populaire, or folk song, that weaves together two melodic ideas first heard in fragmentary form in preceding movements.”

We’ll Go No More A-Roving

James Mulholland is capable of doing. The beautiful poetry, written by Lord Byron George (1788-1824), in a way in which only James Mulholland is capable of doing.

So, we’ll go no more a-roving so late in the night.
Though the heart be still as bright,
And the moon be as bright.
So we’ll go no more a-roving to late in the night.

For the sword that wares out its sheath,
And the soul wears out the breast,
And the heart must pause to breathe,
And love itself have rest.

Were You There?

I find it difficult to remember the exact time that I first heard this piece. Having grown up in the church, I am sure that I have heard it sung many times; especially during Holy Week. However, there is one specific occasion that I do remember hearing this song. Sadly, it was at my grandfather’s memorial service. Since then, it has been an emotionally difficult though always meaningful song for me to sing, conduct, or even play on the piano.

I would like to dedicate the performance of this song to my family, for all that they have provided for me.

Ain’t Got Time to Die

The Black Spiritual is one of the only truly American musical art forms. Dating back to the 1700’s, the texts of black spirituals often refer to the flight of the Israelites from Egypt, and of the hope of salvation in heaven. It is often suggested that this was a reference to the hope of escape from the slavery of the American South to the free North. Many spirituals are said to have a double meaning behind their texts. Ain’t Got Time to Die is an original composition by Hall Johnson, set in the style of a spiritual which plays on the words from the biblical scripture:

>Jesus answered, “I tell you that if they keep quiet, the stones themselves will cry out.” —Luke 19:40

MANY THANKS

Thanks to the people of St. Paul’s for sharing their beautiful church building with us tonight. I would like to thank the congregation and especially the choir of the First Presbyterian Church of Orange for all of their support this year. Thank you Leslie Benjamin, Dr. Larry and Mrs. Kristin Ball, and Dr. William Hall for sharing your wealth of knowledge and love of choral music with me. To my accompanists Louise Thomas and Ken Gillard: thank you for being my support daily at rehearsals and at the concert here tonight. Thank you to my wonderful family for your constant love and encouragement and for helping me every step along the way in my pursuit of education. To my dad for first teaching me to conduct Also Sprach Zarathustra when I was little. Thank you Andrea for your unending support and patience these past few months. Most of all, thanks to my Lord for blessing me with the gift of music.