Dear Mr. Temianka:

I was glad to hear from you and to learn that you are planning to perform Haydn's 'Seven Last Words' in my arrangement. In such cases it is customary to make no charge provided no admission fee is requested and the performers are offering their services without reimbursement. On the other hand a nominal fee is charged if the audience has to pay for the tickets. If the latter applies to your concert I would suggest that in lieu of a honorarium you make a donation of $ 20 to the scholarship fund of the Music Department of UCSB (check to be made out to the Regents of the University of California).

I wish we could attend your concert, but unfortunately we have long standing plans for this particular date.

Sincerely yours,

Karl Geiringer
