My dear Yehudi:

My grateful thanks for your warm-hearted letter of acceptance and your cable. This really makes me very happy.

Dan Catlin, my editor at the publishing firm of David McKay in New York, has advised me that the galleys are on their way to you at your London address. I hope you will like what you read. If I have said anything about you on the very first page that is not completely accurate, please feel free to correct it.

Since time is limited, it would be greatly appreciated if you would write your foreword at your earliest convenience. Hopefully you will give us about 500 words, or slightly more, which is the equivalent of approximately three double-spaced pages. However, please do what comes naturally, and know that I am deeply touched and grateful for this act of friendship.

Emmy and I look forward to seeing and hearing you in Los Angeles in January, and, if your time permits, having a good visit together. I may also be in Salt Lake when you play there.

With affectionate greetings to Dattayandand Diana,

Yours ever,

Henri Temianka
