About the Conductor

PAUL SHERMAN, conductor

Conductor, Wind Symphony, Chapman University Conservatory of Music
Executive Director, ensemble GREEN
Music Director & Conductor, Santa Clarita Youth Orchestras

Conductor, oboist and pedagogue, Dr. Paul Sherman, D.M.A, enjoys a musical career with a wide range of styles and forms. He is now entering his third year as Director of the Chapman Wind Symphony. The Wind Symphony performs both classic repertoire and the best of new wave of contemporary music. He also directs winds chamber music and is an instructor of oboe. For the last decade he has been music director for the Santa Clarita Valley Youth Philharmonic, Orchestra and Prelude Strings, an organization of three orchestras and 200 students based at College of the Canyons. This season his orchestra is a Los Angeles Philharmonic Partner Orchestra and will perform in Walt Disney Concert Hall in May as part of the International Youth Orchestra Festival. He is also deeply involved in contemporary music and is Executive Director of ensemble GREEN along with commissioning works for his large ensembles and solo oboe.

He performs regularly on modern and period oboes in orchestral, solo and studio settings. On period instruments he performs with: Musica Angelica, San Diego Bach Collegium, Harmonia Baroque Players, Del Mar Baroque and is a founding member of Arroyo Baroque. He teaches baroque oboe performance and is director of Le Canards du Roy, baroque oboe band at USC.

RICHARD STRAUSS
Vienna Philharmonic Fanfare

Born into a musical family, Richard Strauss proved early that he was a composer to watch out for. Conductor Hans von Bulow called the composer’s Serenade for Thirteen Winds (1881), written when Strauss was just 17, evidence that the young man was “by far the most striking personality since Brahms.” Strauss is perhaps best known for popularizing and refining the form of the tone poem, with works such as Don Juan (1888-89), Till Eulenspiegel (1894-95), and Also Sprach Zarathustra (1895-96), as well as operas such as Salome (1905) and Der Rosenkavalier (1911). However, Strauss also had a long and fruitful career as a conductor leading the Berlin Royal Opera, the Berlin Philharmonic, the Vienna State Opera, and the Vienna Philharmonic. Strauss even took the Vienna Philharmonic on a tour of South America in 1920 and collaborated on several works for the group, including the fanfare heard in tonight’s concert.

The Fanfare für die Wiener Philharmoniker was written in 1924 for the organization’s first benefit ball, which raised money for the musician’s pension fund. Held on March fourth of that year, the ball took place during the holiday called Fasching in German-speaking countries or also known as Carnival or Mardi Gras in other places. The piece was played while honored guests, such as the Matron of the Ball, arrived at the event. The work has been played at every Philharmonic’s Annual Ball since its inception.

Being the son of the principal horn player for the Munich Court Orchestra may have had something to do with the composer’s ability to write for brass, but whatever his influences, this brief fanfare certainly demonstrates his affinity for striking brass textures. It opens simply, with a single note on the trumpets repeated in the characteristic fanfare rhythm. This expands to a triad, and then the other sections enter one at a time: trombones, horns, timpani, each adding rhythmic and textural complexity. The main theme arrives, marked by the entrance of the tuba. A brief development leads to an even briefer second subject, played more softly and without the triplet rhythm of the first. Soon, the music is slightly varied, so that the web of sound becomes increasingly complex. Listen for the marching horns, the triplets in the brass, and the unrelenting pace. The music builds to a thrilling climax, with a breathless, long-breathed coda before the piece concludes in a final, unrelenting fanfare.

PERCY GRAINGER
Lincolnshire Posy

Conceived and scored for wind band early in 1937, this bunch of “musical wildflowers,” hence the title Lincolnshire Posy, is based on folk songs collected in Lincolnshire, England. Each of the movements is intended to be a musical portrait of the singer who sang its underlying melody. The composition begins with Lincoln Bay, a sailor’s song in a brisk meter with plenty of “lilt.”

ALBERTO GINASTERA
Danza Final (From Four Dances from the ballet Estancia, Op. 8a)

Ginastera finished his ballet Estancia on time in 1942, but the group ensemble for which it had been written had disbanded. The composer had to wait until 1952 to see the work staged as a ballet. Meanwhile, to save the music from extinction, Ginastera extracted this suite from the ballet, creating an invigorating piece that has won its own popularity.

A Malambo is a quick and vigorous Argentinean folk dance in which men compete to demonstrate their agility and machismo. The dance itself is a series of justas or competitive “anything you can do, I can do better” moments, and the “winner” is the last man to remain standing. In the final movement of his suite, Ginastera uses the Malambo format to show the city man competing with the gauchos for the heart of his ranch girl. The movement begins with high piccolo flutterings; then the guitar-like strum of the piccolo line struggles with the underlying accompaniment as one performer is set against another. The same theme repeats over and over, culminating with a breathless, frenzied, wickedly fast trumpet solo. Each time the trumpet theme is heard, the accompanying music is slightly varied, so that the web of sound becomes increasingly complex. Listen for the characteristic sounds of nature that occur throughout this dance, which is ideally performed at night by firelight in an open setting. A masterful thumb roll on the tambourine mimics an insistent cicada, the entire horn section interjects a flurry of elephant peals; the flutes interrupt the melody with the unmistakable twitter of birds.
