My dear Jehudi,

How fast the year has gone by!
Our early celebration of your 70th, at our house, seems so recent, as does that memorable breakfast, when you received letters from two queens vying for your attention. Now 71 comes knocking on the door, finding you as youthful, creative and dynamic as ever.
I have no way of knowing whether the Postman will deliver this note to you on the 22nd, nor whether it will reach you in London, Mykonos, or some other dot on this planet.
Wherever and whenever it may be I send you my affectionate congratulations and good wishes for many more years of continued activity. Your illustrious career, and the lofty standards you have set yourself as a human being, have already secured for you (I have it on the highest authority) an entire wing of the Pantheon — hopefully not before Apr. 22, 2016.

Emmy joins me in sending love to you and Diana. We look forward to our next reunion, no later than June.

Yours with devoted, enduring friendship and affection

Henri
