My dear Yehudi,

Your letter of June 1, inviting me to serve on the jury of your next competition in Paris in October 1992, gives me enormous pleasure and is accepted with joy. What a stimulating time we had together at the last one. Your idea of adding another category for orchestral concertmaster is excellent. One student of mine, who has just passed the 30 mark, anxiously inquired whether there was an age limit, and I am passing on this inquiry to you. I well remember that last time around there was no age limit at all, and I had to be almost physically prevented from entering as a candidate.

I have toyed with the thought of visiting you in Gstaad this summer, but I cannot take the time this year. On the other hand, an extended European visit next year sounds very likely.

A French student of mine was absolument émerveillée by your superb command of the French language in a recent television program she saw. I hope I shall have an opportunity to see it, and that we shall have many reunions between now and October 1992.

With love to you and Diana, from Emmy and me,

yours ever,

Henri
