Dear Richard:

You have royally pampered me with the gift of your brilliant book "The Wall Street Gang", with your generous inscription, plus your lovely note, and the Middle East videotape. I intend to spend the coming weeks, months, and possibly years in a desperate effort to achieve a microscopically small modicum of understanding of that complex financial world in which you are such a towering genius.

Emmy and I watched the tape with great fascination, and I am returning it to you by separate mail. This is a brilliant overview of the history of our times, and I learned much from the previously secret documents made public. It is not quite accurate to state that the U.S. was not involved in the 1956 invasion of Egypt. While France and England botched their part of the scheme, Israeli troops, under General Dayan, reached the Suez Canal within one hundred hours as described in Dayan's brilliant account. Then President Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles forced them to give up their gains, a fatal mistake that later led to the 1967 war.

I am sorry that you and I were not placed in charge of foreign policy and the economy.

With affectionate greetings and thanks to you and Mei-lee,

Yours devotedly,

Hawi
