The other night— at a house I heard a violin recital— with a quartette. alone, and with quartette accompaniment. He played something by Bach (unaccompanied) and seemed to build it up of masses and blocks into a structure like a building. He was young, silent, solid. His voice was pleasant. I think it had been broken, he recalled. He has been in the New papers, his face pictures of figures you see in the New papers. His face was very beautiful. Several people remarked that it was very beautiful. Several people remarked that it was very beautiful. Several people remarked that it was very beautiful.

Ralph Stackpole, 1939, San Francisco
The other night at a house I heard a violinist play with a quartette, alone, and with quartette accompaniment. He played something by Bach (unaccompanied) and seemed to build it up of masses + blocks into a structure like a building. He was young, short, solid, his nose was featured. I think it had been broken, he recalled pictures of fighters you see in the newspapers, his face was very beautiful, several people remarked that it was, he was the apostle for the romantic musicians. I never heard any one play with more success and a beautiful tenacity. With out much imagination you could read a background of struggle and work and try I thought it might have been just mere chance that he has a [camere?] of music, and he has developed it he of just a few people and that it might have been gay for him to have had some other [camere?], one of brutality, he might have been one of the many villains you see in the photographers magazines in the barber shop. His name is Henri Temianka and if he plays in L.A. try to hear him.

I surely will come to see you + Paul when I go south but if you come to S.F. first be sure and kick on the yard gate, or ring the bell up Telegraph Hill. John will play for you and Ginettes pet pigeon will fly on your head.

lots of good luck

Ralph
