Dear Sir or Madam:

It is not sufficiently emphasized in the media that the unspeakable horror of chemical warfare is primarily Germany's contribution to the Gulf War. Time and time again, the West German government has been alerted that German industry was producing vast quantities of deadly gases commissioned by Iraq. The German government, according to many published reports, refused to intervene and allowed the export of the deadly nerve and biological gases to continue unhindered to Iraq. Has Germany learned nothing from the Hitler era and Holocaust?

Yours sincerely,

Henri Temianka
