DEAR MR. TEMIANKA,

IT is always encouraging to get a letter from a professional musician like yourself. IT is a kindness that only a great person could give another. From my limited, though experienced perspective, your achievements are greater than mine, and I marvel that your undiminished energies still allow you to pursue your writing, teaching and guest appearances. I still have twenty-years to catch up and it is unfortunate, for me, that I never personally knew you. Nevertheless, I was honored by your letter and know, that, if you had the time to write, others may be kind enough to consider my works.

I accept your good wishes and extend mine to you, wishing you a continuous musical life which keeps us young.

Sincerely,

William Brerida
