Dear Henri:

As you must know, any admiration you may have had for me has been reciprocated-- thrice multiplied.

But if you were in an audience, and I on the stage spoke in sarcastic disparagement of violinists-- without mentioning WHICH violinists; and members of the audience turned to stare at you while they giggled-- would you be amused?

As a reporter of music and drama over a period of three decades, I have given perhaps nine tenths of my allotted space to dinning an often suspicious and lethargic public into an awareness and a patronage of good things that it was neglecting. I hope to have the privilege of doing so for a few years longer, even though my accomplishments have been discouragingly small; and I am looking forward to enjoyment of your next "Let's Talk Music."

Sincerely,

Pat.

Patterson Greene.
