Program Notes

The Triosonate BWV 1038 was probably composed between 1732 and 1735 when JS Bach was 47 – 50 years old. One of the main musical forms of the eighteenth century, the Triosonate featured 2 soloists (in this case flute and violin) and continuo (in this case cello and keyboard.) At the time Bach was employed as Director of Choir and Music for the city of Leipzig. He resided in an apartment in the School of St Thomas and his duties were to provide music for the weekly services of the four main churches in Leipzig. He was to train the students of the Thomasschule to sing and play for these church services, as well as instructing them in Latin. During these years Bach was also composing music for and directing concerts at Zimmerman’s Kaffeehaus performed by the Collegium Musicum Leipzig, as well as providing music for state funerals, weddings, anniversaries and any other occasions requiring celebratory music.

Bohuslav Martinu was the son of the bell ringer and watchman in the little Bohemian town of Policka. Thus it was that in the small tower room of the church of St. James, where the Martinus lived, Bohuslav was born with the sound of church bells ringing joyously all around him.

Young Bohuslav was thin, and weakly and often had to be carried by his father up and down the 193-step staircase in the tower. He spent the first twelve years of his life looking at his village from this bird’s-eye perspective. The memory of this view of the world impressed itself upon Bohuslav, strongly influencing his ideas of composition. As he was to write later in life, it was “not the small interests of people, the cares, the hurts, or the joys” that he saw from that great height, but “space, which I always have in front of me.”

At age 16 Martinu entered the Prague Conservatory, but by age 17 was failing his exams and forced to leave the school. He remained in Prague, attending concerts, reading, studying scores and composing. There he was exposed to music of Strauss, Bruckner, Stravinsky, Debussy and Bartok. Later Martinu studied composition with Albert Roussel in Paris. His Paris years were spent composing opera, chamber music, ballet and symphonic works. With the outbreak of World War II, Martinu, like so many other European composers found his way to the United States. The First Sonata for flute was composed in Cape Cod in 1945 for Georges Laurent, at the time Principal flutist of the Boston Symphony.

Each year The Paris Conservatory holds a competition in which its flute students are obliged to participate. Most years a new flute composition is commissioned by a French composer for this event. These pieces are written to test all facets of the flutist's ability, from technical to lyrical. Many of these Morceaux de Concours have found their way into the standard repertoire for the instrument. The Sonatine by Henri Dutilleux is an example of this. Composed for the 1943 Flute competition, the work is a tour de force for the instrument.

Dutilleux studied composition, harmony, counterpoint and music history from 1933 – 1938 at the Paris Conservatory. After a year working as a medical orderly during WW II, he returned to Paris and was head of music production for French Radio 1945 – 1963. He taught composition at the École Normale de Musique de Paris and the Paris Conservatoire, and was composer in residence at Tanglewood (Massachusetts) in 1995. Dutilleux resisted association with any “school” of composition, developing his own style which took inspiration from other artists such as novelist Marcel Proust, painter Vincent van Gogh, and poet Charles Baudelaire. Dutilleux was a perfectionist, only allowing a small number of his works to be published, and often revising them even after publication.

Richard Derby has a Ph.D. in composition from the University of California, Santa Barbara. In 1997-78 he held a Fulbright Fellowship to study composition with Justin Connolly at the Royal College of Music, London. A CD of his chamber music is available from Southwest Chamber Music (swmusic.org).

“Isolation” for flute solo was written in May 2014 during a time of personal stress and solitude. To achieve an unsettled effect, several musical techniques were used to “isolate” the musical ideas in the piece from each other: repeated notes, melodic lines, passages and a descending pattern with its own unique pitches and speed. The piece is written for a single, unaccompanied - "isolated" - melodic instrument.

Daniel Schnyder was born in Zurich, Switzerland and resides in New York City. His compositions span a wide variety of genres, from opera to symphonic, oratorio to concerti to chamber works. A saxophonist and composer, Mr. Schnyder performs frequently as soloist with orchestras and jazz bands. He has been composer in residence with the Milwaukee Symphony, the Menuhin Festival in Gstaad and has been consultant for the Absolute Ensemble N.Y.C. for which he also regularly writes music. He holds master classes in composition, improvisation and arranging, and has produced numerous CDs with Arab, Latin American and African musicians. He is extraordinarily prolific and successful as a publishe, performed and performing composer of our time.
